INTRODUCTION

HISTORY AND GEOGRAPHICAL LOCATION OF THE UNIT

The "Institute of Biology of the École Normale Supérieure" (IBENS), created in 2010 at the ENS (Paris), resulted from the fusion of four ENS-CNRS units and two ENS-INSERM units. The IBENS gathers 29 teams grouped in 4 sections: Functional Genomics, Environmental and Evolutionary Genomics, Developmental Biology, and Neuroscience.

MANAGEMENT TEAM

The founding and current director of the IBENS is Mr Antoine TRILLER, The future Director is Mr Pierre Paoletti.

SCIENTIFIC DOMAIN

The IBENS carries out research at the forefront of the modern biological sciences. It has the unique privilege of being part of the École Normale Supérieure, one of the most prestigious academic institutions in France where biologists can rub shoulders daily with some of the best physicists, chemists and mathematicians world-wide. The IBENS main scientific orientations are 4 interconnected topics of functional genomics, environmental and evolutionary genomics, developmental Biology, and Neuroscience with a strong will to perform interdisciplinary research and develop quantitative biology.

GLOBAL ASSESSMENT OF THE UNIT

The basic research in biology performed at IBENS is without any doubt one of the best carried out in France at the moment. An obvious indicator of the quality of research is that more than 25% of the teams hold an ERC grant. Moreover, the quality of the teams evaluated and the quality of the projects presented support the view that even more IBENS teams will obtain ERC funding in the coming years. One remarkable trait of the research performed at IBENS is its interdisciplinary nature with tight links with mathematics and physics. A good balance between senior and more junior groups with a relatively fair gender balance was also noted. The impressive quality of the science achieved at IBENS is obviously supported by the quality of the core facilities. While the HCERES committee was thrilled by the originality and quality of the science which is IBENS major asset, a main concern was raised by the antiquated nature of the housing. In conclusion, the IBENS has been on the overall extremely well evaluated by the HCERES committee.
